WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Today will be dry across the region with light winds, variable high cloudiness and warmer than normal temperatures. The next Pacific storm system will push rain onshore in the far north Saturday morning. By mid afternoon, light rain will reach many locations north of a line from Santa Rosa to Lake Tahoe. Gusty S-SW winds will develop in many areas. Peak gusts in high elevation and east side wind-prone locations Saturday afternoon could reach 30-40 mph and locally higher. Showers will continue mainly in the mountains Saturday night through midday Sunday.

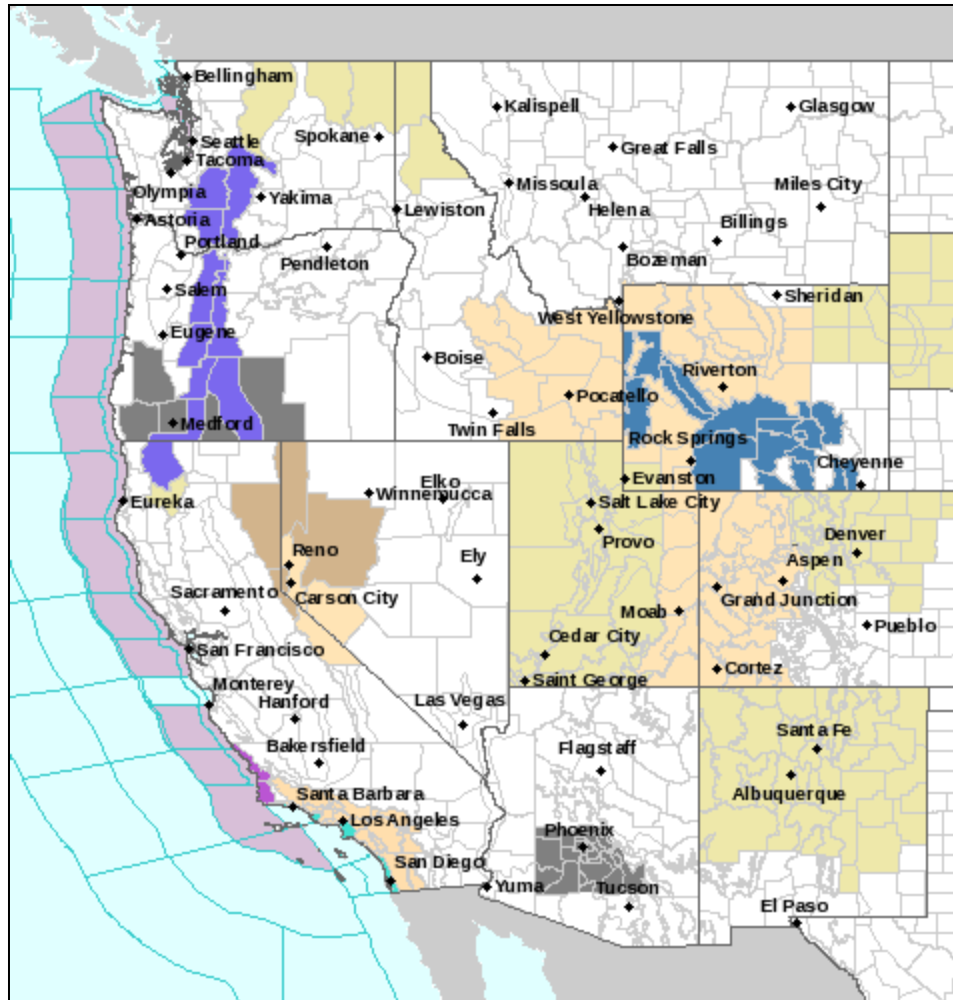

Snow levels will begin to drop Saturday afternoon, and by Sunday morning they will be 2500 ft. in the north and 4500 ft. in the south. Rainfall equivalent totals will only be 0.25-1.00 inches in the NW mountains, 0.10-0.50 inches elsewhere in the mountains, and trace amounts to 0.20 inches in valleys. Some areas east of the Cascade-Sierra crest, south of the line from Santa Rosa to Truckee, and in the central and southern Sacramento Valley will not receive any precipitation at all from this system.

By Sunday afternoon a dry NW-NE surface wind pattern will develop. Northerly winds may gust to 25-35 mph in wind-prone locations Monday morning from the western Sierra slopes to the coastal mountains. Dry conditions with mainly night and morning N-NE winds and a gradual warming trend can then be expected for the next week or so.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A weak low pressure west of the Baja Peninsula will continue to direct high cloudiness into Southern California. This, along with increasing onshore gradients, will lead to a bit cooler weather this weekend. By Sunday, highs will be in the 50s in the mountains to the upper 60s to lower 70s across valley areas of Southern California. Dense fog can be expected during the overnight hours across the San Joaquin Valley the next 3 nights. Local west winds of 15-25 mph will be possible during the afternoon hours in the desert through Sunday. Similar northwesterly winds will be possible along the central coast. Early next week, a trough will head into the Great Basin which will cause north winds to increase Monday. Some gusts to 40 mph will be possible Monday and Monday night across the I-5 Corridor and portions of Santa Barbara County. These winds will turn northeasterly Tuesday, setting the stage for a dry, windy and warm pattern for Southern California. At this time, the strongest winds look to occur Tuesday through Thursday, with some offshore winds possibly lingering into the following weekend. A moderate offshore pressure gradient along with some upper level support may allow this offshore wind event to be stronger than the previous two which occurred recently. Temperatures next week will rise into the 80s in Southern California west of the mountains with minimum relative humidity (RH) dipping into the single digits. Poor RH recovery can be expected next week. No rain is expected.
